Entering the 2003 draft,nike nfl uniforms leaked, Minnesota targeted Kevin Williams,old nhl jerseys, a little-known defensive tackle from Oklahoma State. The team's decision-makers were convinced

Williams would be an elite playmaker, nike nfl uniform, and they were equally confident there were few other teams in the draft's top 10 who thought the same way.

Favre In case you missed it, vintage nhl jersey, Allen told ESPN's Chris Mortensen that Favre needs to report in time for the Vikings' third preseason game, nike nfl 2012 jerseys, scheduled for Aug. 28 against the Seattle Seahawks. Here is the full quote:

"I don't want to drag it out and wait until week one. Brett's a great guy, jerseys online store, he's a great teammate, blank baseball jersey, he's a great quarterback, nike uniforms nfl, but I think [we need an answer] by the third preseason game. That's kind of the earmark. We're ready to rock and roll, discount hockey jersey, and the closer we get to the season, nba champion jersey, we need stability at quarterback."

Trade discussions heated up as the Vikings' 15-minute window opened on draft day. Team officials were close to completing a trade with Baltimore, irish hockey jersey, allowing them to move down two spots to No. 9 overall. The Ravens reportedly wanted to draft quarterback Byron Leftwich.

With about a minute left in the window, west virginia football jersey, however, baseball jersey size chart, the Vikings still hadn't confirmed the trade. They had reported it to the appropriate league official but the Ravens had not, new nike nfl, later saying the phone line had been busy.

God bless Jared Allen for doing his best to express sane and rational thoughts on the timing of quarterback Brett Favre's arrival in Minnesota. One problem: "sane" and "rational" have rarely found a place in this story, toddler baseball jersey, and Allen surely learned that lesson last summer.

Panicked, baseball store, team officials wanted simply to draft Williams at No. 7 overall. But according to reports, mlb jerseys on sale, a McCombs representative in the draft room ordered trade discussions to continue.

As Allen and Leber no doubt know by now, black baseball jersey, their expectations — fair or otherwise — have no impact on Favre's decision-making process. In Favre's defense, cardinals baseball jersey, he never said they would. He has made an annual habit of dragging out his decision, baseball shirts, pushing the envelope further in each of the past two years, nike in the nfl, and no one should be surprised with where we are today.

The mistake could have been more damaging, russian hockey jerseys, but the Vikings had been correct: Neither the Jaguars nor the Panthers were interested in Williams.

Matthew Emmons-US PRESSWIRE The Vikings almost missed out on drafting Kevin Williams in the 2003 draft. The Vikings' master plan was to trade down from their No. 7 overall position and still snag Williams later in the first round. That was music to the ears of then-owner Red McCombs, vintage jerseys, who had placed severe financial restraints on a franchise he was hoping to sell. McCombs figured to save millions of dollars by trading down.

In the confusion, new nfl jersey, the Vikings' time expired. Jacksonville, nike nfl jerseys leaked, holding the No. 8 pick, mlb jersey size chart, nike new nfl uniforms, leapfrogged them to select Leftwich. Carolina jumped up and took tackle Jordan Gross before the Vikings finally nabbed Williams at No. 9.

Allen's sentiment makes perfect sense. But I couldn't help thinking about his perfectly sensible take last summer, customize a basketball jersey, when he said Favre needed to report in time for training camp to avoid a distraction. It also brought to mind linebacker Ben Leber's suggestion in February, create basketball jersey, when he said the Vikings needed an answer from Favre before the draft. Leber called it a "respectable timetable" and added: "I think waiting all the way to the end is going to be detrimental to this team."

,create your own nfl jersey

For what it's worth,nfl jerseys, I agree with Allen and believe his wishes reflect the team's internal hope: That Favre will arrive in time to see meaningful playing time in the most important preseason game of the summer. But at this point,nhl dog jersey, that thought is nothing more than a wish and hope.
